

Lab Safety Study Guide

Know the following:

- Common sense safety procedures
- Why you should know safety procedures
- How to correctly smell an odor from a substance
- Why contact lenses can be dangerous if worn in the lab
- You are never allowed to perform an experiment on your own.
- You are never allowed to eat in the science lab.
- How to correctly pipette
- Eyes should be flushed for 15-20 minutes in the event you get a chemical in them.
- When to use a fire blanket

Lab Safety Study Guide

Know the following:

- Common sense safety procedures
- Why you should know safety procedures
- How to correctly smell an odor from a substance
- Why contact lenses can be dangerous if worn in the lab
- You are never allowed to perform an experiment on your own.
- You are never allowed to eat in the science lab.
- How to correctly pipette
- Eyes should be flushed for 15-20 minutes in the event you get a chemical in them.
- When to use a fire blanket

Lab Safety Study Guide

Know the following:

- Common sense safety procedures
- Why you should know safety procedures
- How to correctly smell an odor from a substance
- Why contact lenses can be dangerous if worn in the lab
- You are never allowed to perform an experiment on your own.
- You are never allowed to eat in the science lab.
- How to correctly pipette
- Eyes should be flushed for 15-20 minutes in the event you get a chemical in them.
- When to use a fire blanket